KILLED A MAN IN A DAZE.

Strange Tragedy in a Brooklyn Barber Shop.

Nicoll, the Accused Murderer, Remanded for Examination.

Benjamin Nicoll, an Italian barber, thirty-two years old, of 44 President street, Brooklyn, was arraigned before Justice Tilden in the Butler street court this morning, charged with the brutal murder of one Moscone, a shoemaker, of 134 Twenty-first street. He pleaded not guilty, and was remanded for examination.

Moscone took his wife and two daughters yesterday afternoon to visit his son-in-law, Joseph White, who keeps a barber shop at 130 Sixth avenue, Brooklyn. Nicoll was an "extraordinary" who worked for fifty Saturdays and Sundays. He was a member of the little party.

All hands sat around in a little room back of the shop. The "growler" was worked industriously, and towards evening the party was shown the results of their disputation. Nicoll lay down in a chair and fell asleep.

Several other persons called during the evening and remained until nearly midnight, when they started for home. White stayed until the shop was closed, and then he went to the street.

Soon after he left, while attempting to make Nicoll, he was suddenly seized from behind by a man who was waiting for him. The man was unable to arouse him, and his wife called for help. One Moscone called Nicoll to the street, and the man who was waiting for him went up and told the old man to let him alone.

"Come, now, it's time for you to go home," said Moscone.

Nicoll, who was frightened, and, drawing a revolver, shot the old man in the back of the head. The bullet entered the brain and killed him instantly. The other occupants of the room were horrified. Nicoll calmly extracted the revolver from his pocket, and then he ran out of the shop and started down the street.

To Jeanne McFarland had heard the shot, and was on the way to the shop when he espied Nicoll making his escape.

McFarland caught him and dragged him back to the shop. Nicoll was hysterical and it was with great difficulty that she was prevented from assaulting him. He was a sayer.

The policeman notified the police of the fatal shooting and a few minutes later, Sergeant Graham and a platoon of police arrived and arrested the entire party as witnesses.

At the station-house, Nicoll claimed no revolver, but denied the shooting. He said he was awakened by a shot and saw Moscone fall to the floor. Then he threw his revolver in a chair and ran away to avoid being arrested as a witness.

When informed that he had been seen reading the revolver after the murder, he seemed to make no further denial. He said Moscone's body will be buried by his relatives.

Brooklyn Maid's Tale of Cast-Off Love Told in Court.

The tale of Henrietta Frazier against Frederick Schiller to recover $5,000 damages for breach of promise of marriage was brought to trial today before Judge Clement in the City Court, Brooklyn.

The plaintiff is a pretty brunette, about twenty years old. Schiller is a widower, his wife having died last April.

According to Miss Frazier's story, she went to court, her agent a month after she was married. She was a student in the law, and her father, who was a lawyer, was her guardian.

Miss Frazier said the defendant repeatedly asked her to marry him. She refused, and he threatened to sue her for breach of promise.

The marriage was to take place in 1921, when Schiller was thirty and Frazier was twenty. She said she was a student in the law, and her father, who was a lawyer, was her guardian.

McGlynn on SATOLLI.
The Ablegate Hailed as a Messenger of Comfort to Catholics.

Rev. Dr. McGlynn, at a meeting of the Anti-Poverty Society in Cooper Union last night, spoke on "Archbishop Satolli and the School Question," hailing the Ablegate as the bearer of great comfort to Catholics.

His coming to America, Dr. McGlynn said, was the beginning of a new and important epoch in the history of the Catholic Church in this country.

Dr. McGlynn refrained from speaking about his own case and the reported authorization of Mr. Satolli to settle it. He referred, however, to the "Archbishop's" address, recognizing the public school as a confirmation of his position on the same subject, which was one of the main points in his controversy with Archbishop Corrigan.

Suma Health Officer Jenkins.
Water Road, of 342 East Twenty-third street, a nurse employed on Water Road, during the outbreak of the epidemic of typhoid fever, was today charged with the same crime.

OMENS IN DISRAELI'S CAREER.
An official of the House of Lords has given me a couple of anecdotes as to the late Lord Beaconsfield, who, so far as I know, says the Post and Register, have hitherto escaped the biographers.

On the last occasion on which the biographer Disraeli accompanied the complaint Rodda makes serious accusations against the phrasing of the biographer, and when I was employed there.

ONE WORTHY TO BE SECOND.
What an Englishman Said to the Queen About a Winnie American Yacht.

Since the great victory of the American yacht Vanderbilt in the Thames five years ago there has been no race in which the American Cup, but the prospect for another contest next summer are now very encouraging.

It is, says the Omaha Bea, peculiarly fitting that the contests should be resumed during the year of the great Columbian Fair, when there will be millions of people here from abroad.

Ever since the famous schooner-yacht America won the trophy in English waters in 1851 the supremacy of this country in the designing and building of fast sailing craft has been maintained.

After a long and true British persistence, have the English tried in vain to regain the cup and thus establish their superiority in the science of naval architecture? I speak is first, my lord.

The messenger returned with an intimation that a place would be immediately available for the messenger's return, but was scarcely worth her while coming round, since the business of the House was over, and it would be up in a minute or two.

But Her Royal Highness would, in any case, have remained where she was, for Lord Beaconsfield had risen a few minutes before the messenger's arrival, and he was the last speech Lord Beaconsfield ever made.

SENSATIONS OF BATTLE.
To One Veteran It Always Resulted in Nausea.

A gentleman who was distinguished in the war of the rebellion for his personal bravery, and who fought in some of the most bloody battles, was recently asked just how it felt to be under fire, says the Boston Globe.

"I shall tell you just how a battle affects me," he asked, smiling. "It is not pleasant, but it is at least true."

"Yes," was the reply, "I tell you exactly what it is like."

"I can only speak of my own feelings," he said, "but it is as if you were in a battle like a champagne drink."

"You mean that it is so exciting?" the questioner asked.

"I mean," was the reply, "that there is first an intense and glorious excitement, and that after that comes a most undignified but inevitable nausea."

"I was never in battle in my life, with out being seasick afterward," he said.

POINTERS ON THE RACES.

Flattery Gets Big Odds for the Feature of the Day.

Track Expected to Be Dry—Youngsters Scheduled to Sprint.

The racing at Coney Island today will be rather interesting, for the card is very well made up. The feature is the meeting between Blitzen, Bel Demonio, Flattery, Prince Howard, Elton and Gold Dollar. Flattery receives eighteen pounds each from Bel Demonio and Blitzen, and it is doubtful if these two, as good as they are, can give the youngster much weight.

King Crab, Arzel and Hyacinthe ought to make a good race at a mile and a quarter, and the three-year-olds should go well in the fourth event. The track should be well dried out and good time ought to be made. The entries and selections are as follows:

PARALYZED BY FEAR.
Fearful Experience of an Engineer Who Expected a Collision.

"It is not often that an engineer stays on his seat in the face of a collision if he has a chance to jump," said an old railroad man to a writer in the Indianapolis News. "When he doesn't jump it's because he hasn't time."

"I remember once when an engineer was metaphorically frozen to his seat. I was on the engine at the time. See these gray hairs? and he pushed back his hat. 'I got them all in about two minutes. It happened on the Indianapolis division of the Pennsylvania lines.'"

"I was in charge of the fast mail train No. 7, and Charley Mann, as good an engineer as ever took hold of a throttle, was hauling us. No. 7 is a fast train, anyhow, but that night we were late out of Columbus, and I tell you, we were splitting the wind."

Having nothing else to do, I climbed over to the engine and asked Charley to let me run her awhile, and he pushed over to give me room. Everything went as smoothly as a Mayday dance until we started down the hill, and suddenly a red light showed up ahead of us on the track. The awfulness of that minute I can never describe. "We are gone," Charley yelled to the engineer behind him. "There's a flat car ahead of us. See that red light?"

Charley said it and started to get down. I yelled to him not to do it; that we might escape death, but if we had jumped from that engine, running at least eighty miles an hour, we would be killed sure. I shut off the steam, and, throwing on the air-brake, began "plugging."

The wheels reversed, but she rode over the sand as if there was none on the track. Charley clung to me with wild-strained eyes, and I honestly believe he was praying. "Neatly, neatly, neatly," that fatal light and dashed past it. Soon we were stopped, and I called the fireman to go back with me and ascertain what it was. He could not move, and when I pulled him from his seat he was as stiff as a poker, and it was several seconds before he could utter a sound.

The poor fellow was paralyzed with fear, and it was a long time before he recovered. What was the red light doing there? I yelled to the engineer behind me to flag a train following us, and had left his red light near the rails. When I met him I never felt so much like murdering a man in my life."

ONLY LOANED FOR A YEAR.
The New Hampshire but Temporarily the Naval Reserve's Home.

It was reported to the Army Board to-day that the loan of the old frigate New Hampshire to the Navy Reserve had been made by Secretary Taft for only one year, and it was decided not to renew the loan unless for rebuilding her and the purpose of the incoming administration could be justified.

An assurance from Adj. Gen. Forster that no new troops of cavalry would be organized under the new administration was given to the Army Board.
